WEDNESDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 6.

He Deserted Her.

The Squire was speculating whether it should be lamb or venison for dinner, when Mrs. Mul-carthy, with an infant in her arms, and a complaint on her mind, interrupted his train of thought. "Are yez the Koort?" ejaculated Mrs.
Mulcarthy in a voice as shrill as a tin whistle.
"I am," rejoined the Squire.

Then the condensed edition of Patrick Henry Mulcarthy made himself heard for about five minutes. "It's meself, bless yer riverence, that's in great distress, an' I have come for to ax yez—to hold yer gob yer thafe of the world."

The Court turned the color of a double breasted boiled lobster at the extreme personal conclusion of the remark; but when the pocket edition of the Mulcarthys split the air with a series of spasmodic screams, he was conscious that it was addressed to it. When the body had given up yelling for something better, the muscular Milesian resumed.

"It's meself that's in the greatest distress, yer Honor. Me husband, Patrick Henry, the father of me child, has skipped."

"Has what?" said the Court.

"Skipped the koort. The tother night I was lying in me bed with this beautiful bairn, when I heard a foot upon the flure. 'Patrick,' sez I, 'Hold yer gob,' sez he. 'Patrick Henry,' sez I, 'be the square toed Moses yer drunk.' Yer another,' sez he. And wid that I slid out in the dark, and wid a grip upon his windpoe an' a rolling pin in his stomach, sez I, 'Patrick Henry Mulcarthy,' sez I, 'yer drunk.' I think me determination sobered him, for wid that he kinder broke out in a perspiration, and it was ten minutes before, yer Honor, I was satisfied if it was the rolling pin or Patrick Henry's head which was busted.

But this morning, on me soul, I was astonished to find that it was Patrick's head, and not the rolling pin."

"What has this to do with a complaint of desertion?" broke in the court.

"That's it, yer Honor. Bless yer soul, I believe the man is raving crazy. An' it's the truth I'm telling yez. The foot of Patrick Henry Mulcarthy has not been heard on that flure since. It's meself, an' it's this kid thet's he deserted, an' left to struggle wid the

"This is a very sad case," said the Court. "I have been apprised of the circumstances by the officers. The gash in your husband's head is about the size of a section of stove pipe, and the doctors are of the opinion that if he ever gets over it, either the county or yourself will have to support him."

"Support him," shrieked Mrs. McC. "Him as could drink the river dry if it was running wid whiskey. An' be hives, he deserted me an' left me bed and board and his beautiful child for to go to a hospital. Support him?
Devil a bit." And she went to a cell, cursing the law and the Magistrate and Patrick Henry Mulcarthy in particular.—Philo Record.

Mr. Wade on the President.

Mr. Benjamin Wade, the implacable radical of Ohio, says:

"Hayes was elected as a Republican, but, instead of pursuing the course marked out by the platform of that party, he has adopted an entirely different policy. The President is simply an executive officer, and it is his duty to see that the laws are faithfully executed. He can not make laws, and is not a dictator, and a policy or measures of government are to be adopted, it should be done by Congress; but yet Hayes has declared a 'policy,' and when complaint is made against it we are told that he announced in his letter of acceptance that he would pursue this course, but it is not so—If Hayes had announced to the people that he proposed to abandon the Southern Republicans and place in his Cabinet a rebel who had fought four years to destroy the Government, he would never have received my electoral vote, nor, as I believe, a Republican electoral vote in the whole United States."

"As to this Southern policy, the pretense of the President that if it did not work well it would be changed or abandoned is all bosh.
When he abandoned the Republican State officers in South Carolina and Louisiana, and turned them over to the Democrats, he placed it utterly out of his power to restore the same condition of things, and everybody knows it. He could not use the Federal power to protect the people there without being called on to do so by the Governor or Legislature; and he had turned over the power to Governors and Legislatures who, as is well known, would give the Federal Government no opportunity to interfere for the protection of the people."

"It was clearly the purpose and policy of the Republican party and the Government not only to protect the negro in his rights, but to educate and to elevate him, yet Hayes has delivered the black man into the hands of his worst enemies."

"I was a delegate to the National Republican Convention, and worked for Hayes' nomination. I introduced a resolution in the Ohio delegation, which was adopted, whereby we pledged our vote as a unit for Hayes, until in the opinion of a majority of the delegation there was no hope of his nomination; after which every delegate was to be at liberty to vote as he saw proper. This undoubtedly held the delegation together, and perhaps aided greatly in giving him the nomination. I desired his success because I thought him honest, that he had a worthy record and that the people of the State desired him as their candidate, but I have never before been so deceived in a public man."

A PIONEER HOUSEWIFE'S STORY.

—One afternoon, in the latter part of last month, the wife of W. G. Livingstone, of the Boyce, noticed four young bears in the wheat field. Mr.
Livingstone being absent at the time, she at once proceeded to drive the intruders off, when one took to a tree on the bank of the river, about one hundred yards from the house, and the other three took to their heels and disappeared, so far as this story is concerned. Mrs.
Livingstone stationed herself under the tree, while her little daughter ran to the house and brought a double barreled gun. Both barrels were discharged at the bear
